Host a Summer Trivia Night

Gather friends and family, divide into teams, and offer small prizes. Set up categories like those above and rotate rounds. To keep energy high, include a lightning round where teams buzz in with answers. You can even incorporate multimedia by showing pictures of summer destinations or playing snippets of summer songs.

Use Trivia for Road Trip Entertainment

Long car rides can be tedious. Print out a set of trivia cards or use a smartphone app. Each person takes a turn asking a question. The person with the most correct answers at the next rest stop wins the privilege of choosing the next snack.

Icebreaker at Parties or Events

When guests arrive at a summer party, hand each one a trivia card. During the event, ask guests to mingle and find someone who knows the answer to their card. This encourages conversation and breaks the ice naturally.

Incorporate into Family Game Night

Board games are great, but themed trivia can be refreshing. Create a custom board with summer landmarks. Each correct answer allows a player to move forward. This works particularly well with children, as you can adjust difficulty based on age.

Engage Remote Teams or Virtual Gatherings

Even if you can’t be together physically, summer trivia works beautifully on video calls. Use screen-sharing to display questions, and let participants type answers in the chat. This is a fantastic way to keep colleagues or distant friends connected during the sunny season.
