

Arkham City Museum Riddler Trophies

Introduction to the Industrial Playground of Arkham City

Rocksteady Studios' Batman: Arkham City remains one of the most celebrated superhero games ever created, largely due to its intricate open-world design and the sheer density of side content. Among the many challenges that await the Dark Knight, few are as infamous or as rewarding as the Arkham City Museum Riddler Trophies. The museum area, which houses the exhibits of the enigmatic Hugo Strange alongside permanent displays dedicated to Gotham's rogues gallery, transforms into a labyrinthine puzzle box when Edward Nigma—better known as the Riddler—begins his interference.

For players aiming to achieve 100% completion, understanding the placement, requirements, and strategies for every trophy within this district is essential. With over 400 trophies, riddles, and puzzles scattered across the entire game, the museum alone contains a dense cluster of collectibles that test both your combat prowess and your lateral thinking. This guide will walk you through the most challenging trophies, the environmental puzzles tied to the museum, and the strategies that will help you outsmart the Riddler without losing your sanity.

Understanding the Museum District's Layout

The Arkham City Museum is one of the largest indoor environments in the game, consisting of multiple floors, themed galleries, and hidden alcoves. Before you begin your trophy hunt, you must familiarize yourself with its vertical structure. The museum is divided into several key areas:

- The Main Hall: The grand entrance featuring dinosaur skeletons and large exhibit cases. Several trophies are hidden in plain sight here, often requiring the Line Launcher or Batclaw to reach high ledges.
- The Joker Exhibit: A twisted carnival-themed area filled with laugh-inducing gas traps and jack-in-the-box surprises. Trophies here often involve timed pressure pads.
- The Penguin Exhibit: A maritime-themed section with ice patches, underwater grates, and mechanical sharks. This area emphasizes stealth and careful navigation.
- The Two-Face Exhibit: A courtroom-like gallery with duality-themed puzzles. Trophies here typically require you to use the Cryptographic Sequencer to hack security locks.
- The Catwoman Exhibit: A high-security vault area with laser tripwires and pressure-sensitive floors. Some trophies are only accessible after completing specific story missions.
- The Rooftop Access: The exterior ledges and skylights that connect the museum to the wider Arkham City map. Several trophies require you to approach from outside.

Each of these zones contains a mix of standard Riddler Trophies (green question mark boxes), Riddler Riddles (environmental scans), and Riddler Puzzles (interactive objects). The museum is particularly notable for its high concentration of puzzle-based trophies rather than simple pickups.

The Four Types of Museum Collectibles

To effectively farm Arkham City Museum Riddler Trophies, you must understand the four distinct categories of collectibles that the Riddler has scattered throughout the district:

1. Standard Trophies: Green question mark-shaped boxes that are physically placed in the environment. Most of these require a specific gadget to reach—such as the Batclaw, Line Launcher, or Freeze Blast—or a combination of timing and gadget use.
2. Riddles: These are environmental scan challenges. You must find a specific object or location that matches a clue provided by the Riddler, then use the Cryptographic Sequencer's scanner mode to reveal the trophy. In the museum, many riddles relate to the exhibits themselves—statues, paintings, or historical artifacts.
3. Pressure Pad Puzzles: These appear as floor panels that must be activated simultaneously or in sequence. The museum has several multi-pad puzzles that require you to use the Remote Electrical Charge to transfer power between panels while standing on one yourself.
4. Breakable Object Puzzles: The Riddler occasionally hides trophies behind destructible walls or floors. In the museum, these are often indicated by faint green cracks in the architecture or suspiciously placed vents that can be shattered with the Explosive Gel.

Key Gadgets Required for Museum Trophy Collection

Before you embark on a museum trophy run, ensure your gadget inventory is fully upgraded. Many of the Arkham City Museum Riddler Trophies are impossible to access without specific tools at their maximum capacity. The following gadgets are essential:

- Batclaw (Upgraded): The standard Batclaw can pull down grates and weak walls, but the upgraded version can grab distant objects and pull you toward magnetic surfaces. At least three museum trophies require the upgraded Batclaw to reach high ledges that are too far for a standard grapple.
- Line Launcher (Dual Mode): Several trophies in the main hall require you to zip across large gaps. The dual-mode upgrade allows you to reverse direction mid-line, which is crucial for platforms that require you to collect a trophy and then immediately zip back to safety before a platform retracts.
- Freeze Blast: Used to freeze waterfalls, create ice platforms on water surfaces, and temporarily disable electrical panels. The Penguin exhibit has multiple underwater trophies that require freezing the water surface to create a temporary walkway.
- Remote Electrical Charge (REC): Essential for powering generators, transferring electricity between terminals, and disrupting security systems. Most pressure pad puzzles in the museum require you to use the REC to connect distant panels.

- Explosive Gel: Used to destroy weak walls and ceilings. The museum has at least five areas where the trophy is hidden behind a destructible surface that appears identical to a normal wall until you inspect it closely.
- Cryptographic Sequencer: Required for hacking security doors and scanning riddle objects. You will use this constantly in the Two-Face exhibit, where nearly every trophy requires you to align frequencies to bypass locks.

Step-by-Step Guide to the Most Challenging Museum Trophies

The Main Hall Dinosaur Puzzle

Perhaps the most iconic trophy in the entire museum district is the one suspended from the ceiling above the Tyrannosaurus Rex skeleton. To access this Arkham City Museum Riddler Trophy, you must use the Line Launcher to zip to a small platform that is only accessible from the second-floor balcony. Once on the platform, you will see a pressure pad that activates a moving platform below. The trick is to jump from the pressure pad to the moving platform while simultaneously using the Batclaw to grab the trophy before the platform moves out of range. This requires precise timing: activate the pad, immediately jump to the platform, and spam the Batclaw button as you approach the trophy. It typically takes three to five attempts to master the timing.

The Joker Exhibit's Gas Chamber Gauntlet

Located in the deepest part of the Joker exhibit, a room filled with intermittent gas vents contains two trophies that most players miss on their first visit. To survive, you must use the Freeze Blast to create ice platforms on the gas vents, then quickly grapple to high ledges before the vents reactivate. The first trophy is on a ledge directly above the entrance; the second is inside a glass case that requires you to smash it with the Batclaw while hanging from a grate above. The gas deals damage over time, so you must have full health and ideally the Armored Suit upgrade before attempting this area.

The Penguin Underwater Vault

Beneath the Penguin exhibit lies a flooded vault that contains three trophies. You cannot simply swim to them because the water is electrified. First, use the Freeze Blast to create a frozen platform that neutralizes the electricity, then stand on it. From this safe zone, use the Remote Electrical Charge to redirect the current to a secondary generator, which opens a grate above the water. Then, quickly dive through the opened grate to reach an air pocket where the trophies are waiting. The timing here is extremely tight: you have roughly 10 seconds before the grate resets. Practice the dive route twice without attempting a grab to memorize the path.

The Two-Face Courtroom Lockdown

The courtroom in the Two-Face exhibit contains a trophy that is locked behind a series of three sequentially aligned security doors. Each door requires a different cryptographic frequency, and the codes are displayed on monitors that cycle every 15 seconds. You must use the Cryptographic Sequencer to lock onto the first frequency, hack the first door, rush to the second monitor before it cycles, and repeat. The difficulty lies in the limited time window and the fact that enemies will respawn in the courtroom if you fail any door. Clear all enemies from the area first, then perform the hack sequence without interruption. This sequence must be completed in under 90 seconds from the moment you start the first hack.

The Catwoman Exhibit Laser Maze

The final major trophy cluster in the museum is located in the Catwoman exhibit, a high-security vault that features a laser maze similar to the ones seen in heist movies. There are three trophies inside the maze, each requiring a different route through the lasers. The technology here is simple: use the Cryptographic Sequencer to temporarily disable laser banks, but only one bank at a time. The puzzle requires you to memorize the sequence of banks you need to disable in order to reach each trophy. Write down or screenshot the bank numbers and their disable order before you start moving. One wrong disables deactivates all the lasers for 30 seconds, but also triggers an alarm that spawns heavily armed guards. Time your movements carefully and be prepared for combat if you make a mistake.

Riddles and Environmental Scans in the Museum

Beyond the physical trophies, the Arkham City Museum Riddler Trophies system includes several riddle-based collectibles that require you to scan specific objects in the environment. These riddles are particularly thematic in the museum, as many of them reference the exhibits themselves. For example:

- Riddle: "What has a tongue but cannot taste, and a tail but cannot wag?"
The answer is a shoe, and the scan target is a giant statue of a clown shoe in the Joker exhibit. This is one of the easier riddles and is located behind the ticket booth at the entrance.
- Riddle: "I am the beginning of the end, and the end of time and space." The answer is the letter 'E', and the scan target is a large letter E mounted on the wall above the elevator in the main hall. Many players miss this because they never look up.
- Riddle: "What is full of holes but still holds water?" The answer is a sponge, and the scan target is a marine sponge exhibit in the Penguin area. It is partially hidden behind kelp decorations.
- Riddle: "I have cities, but no houses; forests, but no trees; and water, but no fish." The answer is a map, and the scan target is a large map of Gotham City displayed on the museum's second floor near the security office.

All riddles reward you with a trophy once scanned, and scanning all riddles in the museum district contributes to the district's overall completion percentage.

Rewards for Collecting All Museum Trophies

Dedicated collectors who manage to secure every Arkham City Museum Riddler Trophies collectible unlock several meaningful benefits. First, each trophy you collect adds to your experience points, helping you level up your gadgets and combat moves faster. More importantly, every 10 trophies you collect unlock a new Riddler Informant location on the map, which appears as a green glowing question mark. These informants provide background lore on the Riddler's schemes and can be interrogated to reveal the locations of other collectibles in the district.

The ultimate reward for collecting all 440 trophies across all districts—including the museum—is the ability to capture the Riddler himself. Once you have collected every trophy, solved every riddle, and completed every puzzle, the final confrontation with Edward Nigma triggers. Defeating him not only provides closure to one of the game's most engaging side stories but also awards you with the "Riddle Me That" achievement/trophy. Additionally, you unlock a special Riddler-themed Batman skin that can be used in New Game
