Why Use Great Gatsby Study Guide Questions?

Before we get to the questions themselves, it is worth considering why this approach is so effective. A novel as richly textured as The Great Gatsby operates on multiple levels. Study questions serve several key purposes:

- Deepen Comprehension: They force you to pause and consider the implications of a scene or a line of dialogue.
- Encourage Analysis: Instead of just following the plot, you begin to ask why characters act as they do and how Fitzgerald achieves his effects.
- Prepare for Discussion: Whether in a classroom or a casual book club, having prepared answers to key questions leads to richer conversations.
- Improve Retention: Active engagement with the text through questioning helps cement details and insights in your memory.
- Reveal Hidden Depths: Many of the novel’s most important themes are subtle. Questions can help unearth them.

Character-Focused Study Questions

Jay Gatsby: The Man Behind the Myth

Gatsby himself is the novel’s central enigma. He is a figure of immense wealth, yet he is forever reaching toward something just out of his grasp. Effective Great Gatsby Study Guide Questions about Gatsby should probe his identity, his motivations, and his ultimate tragedy.

1. How does Fitzgerald build the mystery of Gatsby in the first three chapters? Consider what we learn about him before we ever meet him. What do the rumors about him tell us about the society in which he moves?
2. What does Gatsby’s “incorruptible dream” actually consist of? Is he truly in love with Daisy, or is he in love with an idealized version of her that he has constructed over five years?
3. How does Gatsby’s past—his childhood, his time with Dan Cody, his transformation from James Gatz—shape the man we see in the novel? Is his reinvention admirable or delusional?
4. What is the significance of Gatsby’s death? Does he die as a romantic hero, a tragic fool, or something in between? How does the setting of his death (his empty pool, his neglected mansion) contribute to its meaning?
5. Why does Nick ultimately call Gatsby “great”? What redeems him in Nick’s eyes, despite his involvement in illegal activities and his obsessive pursuit of another man’s wife?

Daisy Buchanan: Object or Agent?

Daisy is often described as a shallow, even cruel figure, but a careful reading reveals a more complex character. Questions about Daisy should push readers to consider her constraints and her choices.

1. How does Daisy’s voice—described by Nick as “full of money”—characterize her? What does her voice reveal about her social position and her values?
2. To what extent is Daisy a victim of her time and circumstances? Consider her marriage to Tom, her role as a mother, and her limited options as a woman in 1920s high society.
3. Why does Daisy choose to stay with Tom after the confrontation in the Plaza Hotel? Is it fear, convenience, genuine attachment, or a recognition that Gatsby’s dream is impossible?
4. Does Daisy ever truly love Gatsby, or is she simply drawn to the attention and the romance he offers? How does she react when he demands that she say she never loved Tom?
5. What is the significance of Daisy’s final choice to not attend Gatsby’s funeral? What does this decision say about her character and her relationship to the tragedy she helped set in motion?

Nick Carraway: The Unreliable Narrator?

Nick is our guide to the world of the novel, but he is far from a neutral observer. Questions about Nick should examine his biases, his judgments, and his own character development.

1. Nick begins the novel with his father’s advice not to judge others, yet he spends the entire book making judgments. How reliable is he as a narrator, and what are his blind spots?
2. Why is Nick so drawn to Gatsby? What does Gatsby represent to Nick that others, like Tom and Daisy, do not?
3. How does Nick change over the course of the novel? What does he mean when he says he “came home” from the East feeling that he wanted “the world to be in uniform and at a sort of moral attention forever”?
4. What is Nick’s relationship with Jordan Baker meant to show us? How does their relationship contrast with Gatsby and Daisy’s, and what does it reveal about Nick’s own values?
5. In the final passage of the novel, Nick reflects on Gatsby’s dream and our own. How does his perspective shape the novel’s concluding message about hope, striving, and the past?

Thematic Study Questions

The Great Gatsby is a dense tapestry of interlocking themes. The most productive Great Gatsby Study Guide Questions will push readers to connect these themes to specific scenes and character actions.

The American Dream

The novel is perhaps the most famous literary critique of the American Dream. Questions on this theme should explore its promise and its corruption.

- How does Gatsby’s rise and fall critique the idea that anyone can achieve success through hard work? What role does crime and social connection play in his story?
- How do the different settings—West Egg, East Egg, and the Valley of Ashes—represent different facets of the American Dream? What does each location tell us about class and opportunity?
- Is the American Dream presented as an achievable goal, or is it an illusion that ultimately leads to disappointment? Consider the fates of Gatsby, George Wilson, and even Tom and Daisy.

Class and Social Stratification

The novel is acutely aware of class distinctions. Questions on this theme should examine how characters navigate and are constrained by their social positions.

- What is the difference between “old money” (represented by Tom and Daisy) and “new money” (represented by Gatsby)? How does each group view the other, and what privileges does old money hold?
- How do characters like Myrtle Wilson and George Wilson represent the struggle of the lower classes? What happens to them when they try to climb the social ladder or challenge the established order?
- Why does Tom feel so threatened by Gatsby? Is it just about Daisy, or is it about something larger regarding class and status?

Love, Desire, and Obsession

The novel’s central relationship is less about love and more about obsession. Questions should help readers distinguish between genuine affection and possessive desire.

- Is Gatsby’s love for Daisy genuine, or is she simply an object upon which he projects his dreams? What evidence in the text supports your view?
- What does the relationship between Tom and Daisy reveal about their marriage? Is it based on love, convenience, money, or something else entirely?
- How does Fitzgerald use the motif of eyes—particularly Doctor T. J. Eckleburg’s eyes—to comment on love, morality, and watching? Who or what is truly seeing in this world?

Symbol-Focused Study Questions

- What does the green light represent at the beginning of the novel, and how does its meaning shift by the end?
- Why is it significant that the light is across the bay, always out of reach? How does this physical distance mirror Gatsby’s psychological situation?
- In the final passage, Nick connects the green light to humanity’s eternal striving. What does he mean, and do you agree with his interpretation?

The Valley of Ashes and the Eyes of Doctor T. J. Eckleburg

These two symbols together create a bleak commentary on the world outside the glamour of the Eggs.
